3 Summary of Research and Teaching Interests

I work in many areas of particle theory, from the energy scales associated with nuclear physics all the way up to the energy scales associated with hypothetical theories such as supersymmetry and grand unification. Such topics on which I have worked include neutrino masses and mixing, the physics of particles containing heavy quarks, quark-hadron duality, the possible experimental signatures of noncommutative spacetime, and QCD behavior as determined by an equivalent gravity theory on curved spacetime ("AdS/QCD"). I am perhaps best known for my work on large N_c QCD and how near our $N_c = 3$ universe lies to this formal limit.

I very much enjoy teaching and the interactions with students that it affords. Thus far, I have taught physics majors from the sophomore to senior levels, as well as graduate students, and anticipate enjoying teaching non-majors in the future. I never tire of the delight of "letting them in on the secret" of understanding, both in the classroom and one-on-one mentoring settings.
